No. 1 and 007

On the same day that the official Communist Party newspaper in East Germany was attacking James Bond, the fictional secret agent, as a fascist, the appointment of a new director of the Central Intelligence Agency was announced by President Johnson.

Bond, of course, is only a skulker in the ranks against the forces of evil represented by the international Communist conspiracy and the global criminal element.

On the other hand, Vice Admiral William F. Raborn, Jr., who succeeds John A. McCone as head of the CIA, holds a rank similar to that of "M," Bond's pipe-puffing boss.

There is, of course, only a passing resemblance between Bond's adventures and those of the real-life agents and their bosses on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

Men like "M" and Admiral Raborn, who was chiefly responsible for the development of the Polaris missile, are scientific types who are more likely to be at home analyzing figures than—like Bond—eyeing them.
